The most courageous and crucial conversation you have is with yourself. Yes, you have crucial conversations with family, friends, teachers, co-workers, or your boss. However, self-reflection, the skill of listening to, and being honest with yourself, is a challenging process. It involves evaluating your own experiences, understanding how you think, learning from mistakes, repeating successes, planning, and revising

Discovering your personal vision and aligning that vision with everyday living, school, work, and relationships is key in purposeful living
